

EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM IN ICELAND

what we have learnt

- Flexible curricula allow for personalized learning paths.
- Most schools are run by state.
- Fewer young Icelanders are entering teacher training programs.
- There's an inclusive school policy - schools without segregation.
- Programs exist for adults to reskill and upskill.
- Iceland was an early adopter of distance learning.
- Limited role of parents.
- Compulsory education 6-16.

... and in some schools you have to take your shoes off

Dissemination of teaching and learning.

A few practical tips.

Run teacher and students training sessions at our schools about strengths and weaknesses of our educational systems in comparison with an Icelandic school system.

Emphasise the beauty of Icelandic nature through sharing photos, opinions and experiences in a school newspaper, on social media & a school website.

Organise Erasmus+ Day at school (play foreign music, teach 'Good morning' in a few languages, do crosswords on European Union, match flags with countries, etc.)

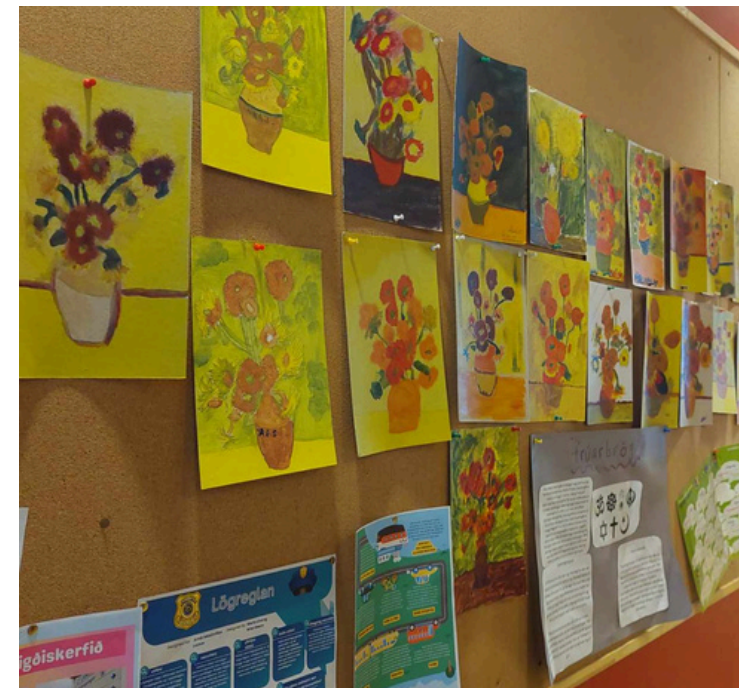

Build partnerships with schools.

Teach about tolerance, openness, communication, integration and motivation.

Contribute to teacher development programs in collaboration with English Matters.

Promote Erasmus+ values through learning about Icelandic culture, history and language in an English class.

Do the presentation for teachers & staff about the Icelandic educational system.
